Empowering Underprivileged Children Through Summer Camps

IDRF supports a variety of summer camps designed to provide underprivileged children with academic and enrichment opportunities they wouldn't otherwise have access to. Through mentorship, peer support, and positive role models, these programs help students build self-confidence, leadership skills, and problem-solving abilities in a nurturing environment.

But it's not all about academics—exposing children to new experiences is equally important.

Adventures Beyond the Classroom

This summer, 37 children from rural schools in Tamil Nadu, supported by the Auroville Unity Fund, embarked on an educational journey to Delhi, Agra, Vrindavan, and Nainital. Along the way, they explored historical and cultural landmarks, took part in yoga and meditation, and participated in adventure sports and theater workshops—broadening their perspectives and learning through new experiences.

Bridging the Achievement Gap

Through partnerships with Bodh Shiksha Samiti, Pratham Education Foundation, Swami Vivekananda Rural Development Society, and Youth for Social Development, our Foundational Literacy and Numeracy (FLN) program provides ongoing support to over 40,000 students over the years. From STEM activities to tutoring, these programs equip children in rural regions to thrive both in and outside the classroom.

Summer Camps That Spark Curiosity

Meanwhile in Odisha, 181 children from 36 villages experienced an inspiring month-long summer camp led by Youth for Social Development.

By diving into literature, science, math, and art projects, these students fought off summer learning loss and stayed intellectually engaged during the break.
